TO DECIDE AT NORFOLK

The obvious purpose of the state Democratic convention next Tuesday will be to name delegates for the national convention and endorse the New Deal. But, we are of the opinion that the most interesting decision to be made at Norfolk will be: What shall the "organization" do about the candidacy of James H. Price for governor.

The Price candidacy will not be heart of on the floor, but it is bound to be the leading back stage topic among the delegates. The "organization" will be able to get a line on how the "boys who can deliver the vote" feel. A formal announcement may not be forthcoming for weeks, but the decision will be made at Norfolk.

In the meantime it is becoming increasingly obvious that Price will be mighty hard to stop.

PARTISANSHIP

Partisanship in newspapers is slowly but surely becoming a thing of the past. The old time party editor who used to condemn viciously and without exception, everything his political opponents did, has virtually disappeared from the current scene.

A picturesque and lively fellow was he. With a pen dripping in virulence and nitroglycerin, he wrote editorials about the other party that fairly scorched the paper on which he wrote. They were written, he never had a good word for his political enemies, and would have deemed himself a traitor if he had allowed even one issue of his newspaper to slip off the press without some blistering diatribe concerning their activities or lack of activity.

But when it came to his own political party, he wrote in honeyed and complimentary terms, always expressing complete satisfaction for what his compatriots were doing to advance the cause of his faith and incidentally of his country. Vaseline and goose grease were daubed in liberal quantities on the backs of the public officials who supported his party's cause, for after all were not they righteous in every deed and deserving of special anointment.

Possibly because editors got tired of running prejudiced sheets, or more likely because their readers began to demand full information on all public questions a gradual decline in the number of partisan newspapers started about a quarter of a century ago.

The most powerful newspapers in this country, while still retaining party labels in a subdued sense, adopt a non-partisan view in the discussion of political questions. They are as likely to criticize their party's policies as they are to approve, and they as often see some good in the activities and platforms of their opponents.

There should be no particular sorrow over the passing of the partisan newspaper editor. He has had his day. His influence was not constructive, and he failed completely to perform the task every good newspaper should try to do, and that is to give both sides on all public issues.

State Ends Fiscal Year With Surplus

With the commonwealth due to close the present fiscal year on June 30 with a cash surplus of $221,273 Governor Perry has indicated that the "fine showing" of the state's financial situation would mean the full restoration of the existing 10 per cent cut in the base pay of state employees. Under the power granted by the 1936 general assembly, the governor can restore the salary cut as of July 1.

No decision has been reached as yet as to the continuance of the five per cent general expense cut which the governor can continue if he will continue this reduction at least until after the effect of the presidential campaign upon business conditions is disclosed.

According to figures announced by Governor Perry, Virginia is moving into a new fiscal year with a cash balance of $2,706,989.94 and $719,637 must, at the direction of the assembly, be carried over into the new year. The obligations of the general fund, this leaves $221,273 as the unencumbered cash balance.

The governor revealed that had not the departments cooperated to the fullest in the state-wide program of keeping expenses at a minimum the commonwealth would be going into the new year with a deficit of $721,175. He pointed out that economies in state operation, no less than unexpected increases in revenue, account for the remarkably fine condition of the state's general fund.

FORD V-8 ECONOMY MEANS HIGH "Dollar Mileage"

(MORE MILES PER DOLLAR)

NO MATTER how you classify your expenditures for car up-keep—it's your total expenditure that counts. How much "dollar mileage" is your car giving you?

Dollars do go farther in the Ford V-8. Modern improved carburetion gives you unusual gasoline mileage with brilliant V-8 performance. Most owners of today's Ford change oil only every 2000 miles and add none between changes.

And after the first few thousand miles you begin to understand what Ford V-8 "dollar mileage" really means.

$25 A MONTH, after usual down-payment, buys any model 1936 Ford V-8 car—from any Ford dealer—anywhere in the U. S. Ask your Ford dealer about the new Universal Credit Company 1/2% per month Finance Plan.
